Leadership Faculty Chosen to Speak at ALE Conference

HAYS, Kan. (May 10, 2011) The Department of Leadership Studies has been working rigorously on leadership education. The faculty will be attending the Association of Leadership Educators (ALE) Conference this summer. The conference takes place in Denver, CO from July 10th – 13th. ALE is an organization of educators who teach leadership in a variety of fields. The members include college educators, student affairs personnel, youth educators, community and nonprofit educators, military development personnel, and leadership consultants.

Many of our faculty has been ask to present as authors at the conference. The faculty presenting is as follows: Jill Arensdorf as a single author, "Utilizing a Living Learning Community to Enhance Freshmen Student Leadership Development" and she is also teaming with John Montgomery for a second session called, "Preparing Tomorrow's Leaders for a Global World through Study Abroad Experiences." LeAnn Brown, Brett Whitaker, and Justin Greenleaf will be collaborating on their presentation named, "Utilizing an Innovative Co Curricular Model to Teach Leadership in the International Environment.

It is an honor to have not only one but five leadership faculty presenting at the ALE conference. We are proud that the Department of Leadership Studies will be recognized and representing Fort Hays State University at the conference.
