Red Hills University was found by William Savri, Adolf Bowers, Lillian Meyer, Michael Jenkins, and John Stance. All doctors that came to this area to research more on the Shidhisse that held medical wonders. RHU received its name from the influence of the reddish color of the Shidhisse plant that covered the eastern mountainside of where Savri is now. Since the late 1800s, Red Hills University has been one of the leading medical research institutions in homeopathic medicine. The main principles of the research date back to how Native Americans used and respected the land. RHU also provides a well-rounded education in the non-medical field, with business, law, agriculture, arts, and informatics.
