Features

Student-athletes from Fort Hays State University and the University of Central Missouri are set to battle it out when they meet in the MIAA at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Lewis Field Stadium. The Tigers lost to the Mules, 24-23, at home in the first meeting.

The BestSchools.org selected FHSU's program based on several criteria for its 2016 Military Friendly Schools designation. This honor is given to colleges and universities that do the best job of educating service members and their families. The designation provides service members and their families with the best opportunity for academic success. The criteria include a commitment to providing quality education and a commitment to helping military families. The BestSchools.org does not accept compensation in exchange for inclusion in the list. The list is based on a methodology that includes data on the military community and the university's commitment to helping service members. The list includes both two-year and four-year colleges and universities, graduate programs, and online programs.

In the south end of Forsyth Library, students work on a new FHSU project - a student-designed, student-built garden on Big Creek's flood plain. This is the culmination of several years of planning and hard work. The garden will be a place for students to learn about sustainable agriculture and gain hands-on experience in the field. It will also be a place for the community to come together and enjoy the beauty of nature. The garden is part of a larger initiative to make FHSU a more sustainable and environmentally friendly campus. Students are already hard at work, planting seeds and tending to the plants. They are excited to see the garden grow and to see the many people who will enjoy it.